

Dear Lockie,

I wish to share the book called Great Expectations with you since I know you seldom read English books. This Chinese - English edition could help you improve your vocabulary power.

The story follows a poor boy called Pip to a cemetery. He commemorated his deceased parents. He met a convict and helped him out of his kindness, which changed his life. Later, he met Estella, a beautiful girl who became his true love. Pip then aspired to become a gentleman to win Estella's love. What Pip remained unaware of was that the convict he once aided was secretly trying to transform him into the gentleman he strived to be.

The convict said in the story, 'I wanted to pay you for the kindness you show me. I swore I would make you a gentleman, no matter what I have to do.' I trust that you can cultivate a sense of gratitude, similar to that convict. Furthermore, I hope you can be the person who is as kind as a ray of sunshine, just like the protagonist.

This book reveals the challenges faced by the underprivileged and uncovers the darker aspects of our world. I would like to remind you that many things are more important than money and status.

With love,

Hymn
